The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) estimates that one-third of food produced for human consumption is lost or wasted worldwide, which amounts to approximately 1.3 billion tons per year. When this figure is converted to calories, it means that about 1 in 4 calories intended for consumption is never actually eaten. Food loss and food waste usually refer to the decrease of food in subsequent stages of the food supply chain, 46 initial production down 46 final household consumption. The decrease may be accidental or intentional, but eventually leads to less food available for all.

According to the FAO, the food 47 by retailers and consumers in the most developed countries would be more than enough to feed all of the world's 870 million hungry people. At the retail level, large quantities of food are rejected 48 quality standards that over-emphasize appearance. At the consumer level, insufficient purchase planning and expiring "best-before-dates" also cause large amounts of waste, in combination with the careless attitude of those who can afford to waste food.

Food loss and waste have many negative economic and environmental impacts. They 49 resources since the production of food has to consume vast quantities of water, fertilizer, land, labor and capital; meanwhile, the fuel burned to process, refrigerate and transport food also adds to the environmental cost. Most food waste is thrown away in landfills, 50 it decomposes and releases methane, a powerful greenhouse gas, which contributes to global warming as well as climate change.

Section III: Reading Comprehension 閱讀測驗

本部份含二篇短文，請根據各篇文意選出最恰當的選項，劃記於答案卡上。共計 10 題，每題 2 分，共 20 分。

Text 1

Humans of New York, also known as HONY for short, is a blog owned by a photographer, Brandon Stanton. It has become a beloved social media resource enjoyed by millions around the world.

Stanton started to work on HONY when he moved to New York City after giving up a successful career as a stockbroker to do something more fulfilling. He endeavored to photograph 10,000 portraits and plot them on a map of his new home city. This idea has then unexpectedly become Humans of New York.

Every day, Humans of New York brings millions of people together to reflect on the stories and photos of strangers. Most photos are shot wherever an interesting subject is encountered by Stanton. The trademark quotations that accompany each HONY portrait are the product of carefully constructed interviews Stanton holds with his subjects. Stanton said he is able to convince people to share personal stories with him through his genuine concern for their wellbeing and his desire to get to know them. It is the story of the human experience that takes center stage. No filters or celebrity influences; just a page dedicated to displaying real thoughts from real humans. For many HONY fans, part of its power is that the posts seem to speak to the universality of the human experience, despite humans' differences.

HONY today is not the idea Stanton had five years ago. It is now a project dedicated to not only New Yorkers, but humans of the world. It is a mix of photography and storytelling, a true social media phenomenon, and a powerful force for good. It is the result of what he calls "hundreds of small evolutions." And this evolution is ongoing.

51. What would be the best title of this passage?

- (A) A Brief Introduction to HONY.
- (B) Stanton—A Living Legend.
- (C) A New York Craze.
- (D) The Revolution of HONY.

52. Why did Stanton start to work on HONY?
- (A) Because he moved to New York City.
 - (B) Because he had a miserable stock trading career.
 - (C) Because he wanted to do something more fulfilling.
 - (D) Because he wanted to photograph 10,000 portraits.
53. Which of the following words can replace "endeavored" in the second paragraph?
- (A) Strived.
 - (B) Exaggerated.
 - (C) Strengthened.
 - (D) Refuted.
54. Which of the following statements is NOT true?
- (A) Part of HONY's power lies in the universality of the human experience.
 - (B) Most photos are shot without the person's knowledge.
 - (C) Stanton uses a simple page to display real thoughts from real humans.
 - (D) The trademark quotations with each HONY portrait are from well-constructed interviews.
55. Based on this passage, we can infer that _____.
- (A) HONY today remains the idea Stanton had five years ago.
 - (B) Stanton talks people into sharing personal stories with him by offering coupons.
 - (C) Stanton has trouble making strangers feel comfortable sharing things about their lives.
 - (D) HONY is a true social media phenomenon which encourages a positive mental attitude.

Text 2

Remember when you were a kid and you would chase down the ice cream truck? Have you ever wished that instead of finding the ice cream, the ice cream could find you? Brace yourselves, ice cream fans. In celebration of National Ice Cream Day, Uber, the app-based car-hailing company, will bring ice cream to you.

Earlier this year, Uber launched a new food-delivery app and website UberEATS in Toronto. It has slowly been introduced into the US, reaching Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York, and many more major cities in the time since. In honor of National Ice Cream Day, July 15th, Uber will deliver free ice cream to customers as part of its "Uber Ice Cream" promotion. If you happen to live in Austin, Atlanta, New York, Los Angeles, Miami, Chicago or San Francisco, or any of the other 20 cities where Uber has launched its food delivery service, you can order free ice cream.

To make a request, download the official Uber app, and then choose the Ice Cream option. From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Uber users can summon ice cream to their location. Once you make your request, you'll be enjoying your dessert within minutes if a vehicle is available. And there is even a one-day-only strawberry flavor specially made for the event.

In the past, Uber has had similar campaigns with puppy and kitten deliveries to office buildings, and ice cream is always a welcome back-up when no baby animals are available.

56. According to the passage, Uber will deliver free ice cream to customers in order to _____.
- (A) celebrate its anniversary
 - (B) honor National Ice Cream Day
 - (C) promote a new ice cream flavor
 - (D) encourage people to live in Toronto

57. According to the passage, what kind of people can have free ice cream?
- (A) Whoever has downloaded the official Uber app.
 - (B) People who have ever requested puppy and kitten deliveries.
 - (C) People who live in cities where Uber has launched its food delivery service.
 - (D) Whoever orders ice cream on National Ice Cream Day.
58. What does the word "summon" in the third paragraph mean?
- (A) Utilize.
 - (B) Transform.
 - (C) Surrender.
 - (D) Order.
59. What can be inferred from this passage?
- (A) People in Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York now can enjoy Uber's food delivery service.
 - (B) In the past, Uber has never had similar campaigns like ice cream delivery.
 - (C) New York is the first place Uber launched its new food-delivery app and website UberEATS.
 - (D) People can order ice cream without downloading the official Uber app.
60. Where would we probably see this article?
- (A) In a local newspaper.
 - (B) In a history book.
 - (C) In a medical journal.
 - (D) In a psychology magazine.
